Honorong, June 24TH, 1880.

We reprinted a translation from a Shanghai contemporary the other day of an article on foreign medicine which appeared in the Sinpan. The Sin-pao is a journal started in influence of the Shen-pao, which journal propounds very liberal opinions and has proved a great success. The Sin-pao, in spite of its official backers, finds little favour among native readers, and this is not be wondered under the direction of Sergeant Hassard, played a harsh one, but at the time it was passed it discussions with him, thus causing much anxiety readily repelled by the Chinese gunbeats, unless find place in its columns as that on foreign house. medicine above referred to. The writer commences by lamenting the decline of Chinese medical knowledge in modern days, and deplores the fact that the native doctors regard medicine merely as a means of making money instead of a method of saving life, and that instead of studying it, the professors of the healing art only care about getting fees, and are reckless of their patients lives.

In the the statements - but they are only the basis upon which an attack is made by this scribe upon foreign medical science. "Most reckless of all are those," he says, " who have begun to practise medicine on the foreign system." He then goes on to remark that foreign medical science cannot compare with the Chinese in point of age and be therefore wonders foreigners have not taken to the long established system. of China in preference to their own, which is in its infancy. We might imagine that the writer was attempting a clumsy joke, but for what follows. They perform the most horrible and disgusting of operations with the nonchalance of a juggler playing with his ivory balls, utterly regardless of their patient's life. The proverb that it is no good to cure a disease if you kill your patient applies to them thoroughly. These doctors are just like executioners, except that the latter kill by order those who ought to die." This is almost too abourd to need refutation. Few of the natives who have had acquaintance with foreigners would endorse these silly and unfounded state. ments. They were probably penned by some

THE NEW VICEROY OF INDIA

Some little sensation has been created by the statement that the Marquis of Ripon is a Jesuit The Globe of to-day, referring to the report says :- " Up to the present moment we have purposely refrained from criticising the somewhat anusual proceeding of appointing a Roman Catholic to such a high and immensely powerful position as that of Viceroy of Hindestan. seemed to us that the religious views of Lord Ripon could not do much harm in this post a all events, while his appointment would gratify the Roman Catholics of England by showing that the State did not consider their greed an absolute bar to office. It was our conviction, of course in spite of the contrary impressions spread abroad by certain ill-considered writings of Mr. Gladstone-that Lord Ripon would keer a perfectly single mind in all affairs of State not in the slightest degree touched by sectorian bias. But the matter assumes an altogethe different aspect, if there be any truth in the report now current on the Continent, that his lordship is a member of the Society of Jesuite This statement is quite openly made by ferven Roman Catholics on the other side of the Channel, and they proclaim; aloud their by at what they consider a signal mark of favour to their oreed, bestowed on it by the Protestant Government of Protestant England. INGLISH AND CHINES DICTIONARY, WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN PEONUNCIATION.

An Anglo-Chinoso Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have to late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous ob jects in machinery, photography, telegraphy and in science generally, which the rapid sdvance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is ANNUAL INCOME £250,000 Starling. fully illustrated and explained, forming exercisesfor students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best rinciple hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, schieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration :--Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medburst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst FILE Undersigned, Agents at Hongkong for Customers may be misled and induced to think this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese charac- Policies against FIRE, to the extent of £10,000 ters. to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect Lee Sino, of the Lai Hing Firm, the work will be found indispensable to all Wong Yik Pun, of the Chun Cheong Wing Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasion-

EXTRACTS. THE ODE OF EVIL.

Oh, who will sing of Life and not of Ill. The essence of our will Is fullent liberty to atray From out the green and blessed way Amid the desert wastes of drought and death This is the power that makes us free. This of our Being is the penalty; And may be the Eternal Will, Clothing itself with form to bid erection be. Took to itself some boundary, and while,

Self-limited, made vile And subjected to Law the majesty Which all the universe of space did fill.

Evil is Life, The conflict of great laws porvading space; Evil is strife. Which keeps the creature in its ordered place. Many hand Divine should e'er withdraw.

The fixed coordive potency of law, Surely the universe of things would fade And cease and be unmade. Where Law is, there is Good And freedom to obey or to transgress:

Else 'twore no law, but, weaker far and less, If one created being might not the thing it would. Young lives spring up and fade, Wither and are opprest; Toil takes the world, and pain;

And all the things that God has made Travail and groan and fain would be at rest. And Wrong prevails again. And we-we lift a hopeless eye-Up to the infinite sky, Mourning the ill that is and shall be yet.

Are born of strife.

Weak creatures who forgot The very law and roof of Life. That it is sown in pain andmursed in woo and strife The victories of Right.

There were no day were there no night, Nor, without dying, Life. There only doth Right triumph where the Wrong Is mightest and most strong :

There were no good, indeed, were there no ill. And then the final victory shall come. Not within time or space.

But in some infinite place Before the eternal throne: There, ways to day divergent, Right and Wrong Approach the nearer that they grew more long. There at the eternal feet.

Lanes drawn in opposite ways grow one.

Fused, joined, and grown complete. The circle rounds itself, the endosing wall Of the Universe sinks down, and God is all in all.

One day, during a long vaca- the picture, though he stole side-long looks minutes Louis Philippe presented himself tion tour in Spain, he brought at an old bric. at it through the corners of his eyes. It was again before a large crowd exulting with a brac shop in Barcelona a picture which a little thing-not much more than twenty impatience and joy. The Marseillaise was proved to be a genuine Murillo. His pride inches squire—the head of a golden-haired, lustily raised by the crowd. The new king at this achievement was great, and from that hlue-eyed girl, nothing more. But what a was about to retire from the balcony, but time he hegan to form a picture-gallery. His head, and what eyes! Our poor Baron was stopped in the midst of the applause, and nurchases were frequent but never reckless. in love with them, that is the plain truth. sung with the people, marking time with
